

QUIET SESSIONS ARE LOOKED FOR

NO IMPORTANT BUSINESS THIS WEEK IN LEGISLATURE

MANY LEGISLATORS HOME

Most of the Lawmakers Wanted to Adjourn To Spend Washington's Birthday At Home and Get Opinions of Constituents.

[BY UNITED PRESS.]
Madison, Wis., Feb. 20.—Little business will be transacted in the Wisconsin legislature this week because there will probably not be a quorum present in either house. Most of the members wanted the legislature to adjourn over from last week to spend Washington's birthday at home and did not believe it worth while to come back for a day or two's work. However, the two houses got into a squabble last Friday and adjourned until this evening. The leaders of the two houses have agreed not to permit anything big to be pulled off in the absence of a majority of the members. It is probable that sessions will be held most of the week, but no bills of importance will be passed or hearings of interest held.

While at home this week the lawmakers will have an opportunity to find out what their constituents think about some of the important bills pending before the legislature. Thus, much as the number of petitions presented to the legislature has so far been small, it is believed by some that the people of the state have not yet become fully informed on some of the big questions pending before the lawmakers.

Senator A. W. Sanborn, chairman of the joint committee on workmen's compensation and industrial insurance, says that his committee will be ready to report in the bill on this subject some time next week. It is not expected that the committee will materially alter the bill as introduced. This measure provides a system of compensation for injured employees, who through no fault of their own are hurt while performing their work, and for the aid of their dependents if they lose their lives while so engaged. The theory is that the product of the employee should bear the entire cost of production, including the hazard incident to the employment. In other words an injury to an employee is regarded as an injury to the machinery and the loss occasioned by either should rightfully be added to the cost of production. Friends of the pending bill, who include representatives of big industries as well as those of laboring classes, expect this bill to become a law. Bills abolishing the old defenses of contributory negligence and assumption of risk have been introduced, but if the compensation bill passes it will not be necessary to pass them. Another pending bill relating to the same subject authorizes nine or more employees of 1,000 or more employees to form mutual insurance companies to assume the risks of all. Still another bill removes the limit of recovery of damages for death, which is now $10,000.

The contest between Pres. C. R. Van Hise of the state university and Prof. C. P. Cary, state superintendent of public instruction over the bill abolishing the right of the state university authorities to inspect free high schools to determine whether their graduates shall be admitted to the university without examination and placing high school inspection entirely under the control of the state superintendent promises to be one of the big events of the session. This contest has been going on for nearly a decade. University authorities claim that university inspection is stimulating and helpful; the state superintendent claims that it makes the schools simply preparatory institutions for the university and diverts them from their true work which is to afford students a well-rounded, general education. It does not seem probable that there will be much change in the present system of dual inspection by both university and state superintendents.

The Wisconsin bankers generally opposed to Sen. Owens bill providing for guarantee of bank deposits and segregation of savings from commercial deposits. The senator and other members of the legislature have received many letters from bankers and bank stockholders opposing the bill. The senator says that the bankers of Wisconsin are the best organized business body in the state. He does not expect that the guarantee bill will be passed, but he hopes that the discussion of it will be profitable. It will tend to place the banking business on a better basis than it is at present. The saving segregation bill may be passed. Sen. Owens believes it will be.

Women lobbyists are preparing to make a strong campaign for the passage of the Jones or Kenner bill giving women the right to vote. The bills are duplicates, one being introduced in the senate and the other in the assembly as is the custom followed in the case of most important measures. The bills have a referendum clause providing that the proposed law shall not become effective until approved by a majority of the male voters.

Committee hearings will not begin in earnest until next week, when a large number of important measures will come up for consideration.

INSURGENT LEADER MAKES STATEMENT TO UNITED PRESS

Simon Berthold, Leading Forces
Around Mexican, Predicts International Complications Over Present Situation.

[BY UNITED PRESS.]
Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 20.—Simon Berthold, leader of the Mexican insurgents operating around Mexico, Mex., who was thought to be personally leading his men in repelling the federal forces has been in Los Angeles purchasing arms and ammunition. Before he returned to the border today, Berthold gave the United Press the following statement regarding the Mexican situation:

International complications are likely to result from the present situation. Strange things have happened there that will happen unless the policy of the American state and war departments regarding affairs about the Mexican border is altered.

For a week I have been in Los Angeles to see if something cannot be done to stop the interference with our affairs by the border officials. General Bliss issued an order that we must not cross the border to purchase supplies and we thought that was as far as the United States dared to go. But we have since learned that permission has been given the Diaz government to move its troops across the border.

I want to say that if this course is persisted in there is going to be international trouble. Does the American government expect insurgent Mexicans to retire to the mountains and allow these federal troops to occupy Mexico?

Not if I have anything to do with it. The insurgents at Mexico will be waiting at the American line ready to fire upon the Mexican federal troops as soon as they come within range. This undoubtedly will precipitate international trouble, but nevertheless what any man who believes in his fighting rights would do, will be done by the insurgents.

CLARK'S BREAK CAUSES TROUBLE TO ADMINISTRATION

Every Effort Possible Being Made to Evade the Trouble That This Has Caused.

[BY UNITED PRESS.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 20.—Every available species of diplomatic and legislative patching apparatus was brought into play by the administration in a frantic attempt to fill up the yawning hole in the reciprocity bill caused by Champ Clark's Canadian annexation petard.

A case of administration freeze unrequited since the days of Roosevelt has shaken the white house and President Taft, having discovered that Clark's "sneaky little scheme" is in a fair way to develop, has been forced to take a series of orders calculated to reassure the Canadians.

But despite all of the president's efforts to show that Clark's statement was a fair and honest expression of his private opinion, Canada and more particularly England are excited to a point where a repudiation of the agreement is probable. This has disturbed Taft more than anything that has happened so far in his administration.

Meanwhile the standard republicans who opposed the agreement are enjoying themselves immensely and adding everything they can to the disagreeable end of the situation. They declare that the prophecy made on the floor of the house by Representative Fordney (Rep., Mich.) has already come true. Fordney said: "I see that Mr. Clark and our good president are sleeping in the same bed. I want to say as a warning to the republican president that when he awakes from the dream he will find that he has been hobnobbing with a nightmare."

NEW APPARATUS GIVEN SEVERE TEST

Chemical Attachment to Chief Klein's Automobile Proves Its Value.

This morning the new chemical apparatus recently purchased by the city and placed on the fire chief's auto, was tested out in front of the fire station for its efficiency. The tank was charged and put in operation and a nozzle an eighth of an inch in diameter was used with the hose coming with the equipment. The charge lasted for about fourteen minutes, but lost a good deal of its strength after the apparatus had been used about ten minutes. A pressure of one hundred and fifty-five pounds was secured at the outlet of the tank.

It has been decided a large stream will be of more service in fighting small blazes and hereafter a three sixteenth inch nozzle will be used. This, it is expected, will throw a stream of sufficient force for about four minutes by which time the fire wagons or the fire patrol will be at the scene of the fire, or if necessary the reducer attached to the equipment on the chief's auto and a stream of water used in extinguishing the blaze.

The auto with the equipment was weighed this morning and tipped the scales at 3,500 pounds. The auto alone weighs 2,700 pounds, making the weight of the chemical apparatus, 800 pounds.

FILIBUSTER ENDED BY THREAT OF THE GAG RULE METHOD

Tawney Leads Fight To Help Pass
the Needed Appropriations This Session

[BY UNITED PRESS.]

Washington, Feb. 20.—When the House resumed its session at ten o'clock today a concerted effort led by Tawney, of Minnesota, to enforce a gag rule to limit debate and compel the House in continuous session since Friday morning. With the killing of the Omnibus bill, Mann of Illinois, who waged the record filibuster against his end. It is now thought that Mann will come to block business may make possible the rushing through of all appropriation bills before March 4.

It was by turning over to the House Democrats a practical veto on every bill to be passed at this session of Congress, that the republican house leaders today crushed the filibuster against the "china" bill, which for three days tied up legislation and threatened an extra session.

By a vote of 173 to 42, the House adopted a "gag rule" which will result in the consideration of bills from now until the session ends under "suspension of rules."

In order to take up bills in this manner, however, a two thirds vote to suspend the rules on every individual measure will be necessary. The Democrats as a result, can absolutely prevent consideration of any bill. Immediately after the rule passed the House took up by a two thirds vote, the war claims bill, under consideration since early Sunday as a substitute for the Omnibus claims bill.

Forty minutes debate on each bill be the limit of discussion and no bill will take more than an hour and a half on the floor.

The war claims bill passed the house at 12:46 p. m. After having been under consideration since last Friday because of the filibustering waged against it.

Representative Fitzgerald of New York, member of the committee on appropriations, announced in the house today the sundry civil bill will carry provision for the fortification of the Panama canal. The statement was made in response to a question from Rep. Hobson of Alabama, and was greeted with applause.

CAT IS DRUG FIEND

Savannah Tabby Sent to New York for Treatment.

Animal, Owned by Druggist, Contracts Morphine Habit in Store and Seeks Bottle Where Opium Is Kept.

New York.—When the Savannah Line steamship City of Montgomery arrived here the other day from Savannah, Ga., she brought a most remarkable passenger to New York in the shape of a valuable Persian cat that has been credited in the dispatches from Savannah as being a confirmed morphine fiend.

The Persian cat is the property of a druggist in Savannah named Hollinsky, a man prominent in the southern city, and he sent his pet Persian to New York for treatment by specialists in the hope that the cat may be cured of the morphine habit.

Some months ago the cat sniffed at some morphine, powdered, that was being used in a prescription in Mr. Hollinsky's pharmacy. The animal acted peculiarly after that, and was constantly on the shelf on which the brownish bottle containing the drug stood. Several times Mr. Hollinsky found the powder scattered about, and each time the cat acted in the same manner that a human being acts when under the influence of the opiate.

The morphine-stricken feline was taken on board the Savannah liner by Mr. Heaton, the druggist's assistant, and placed in a room on the City of Montgomery. There were many persons on the pier at Savannah to see the cat leave for New York, for the cat's fame had spread throughout the southern city, and it was considered very much of a local celebrity.

No provision had been made for morphine on board the steamship, and the cat, frenzied because of the absence of the drug, made its escape from the cabin in which it had been placed and leaped overboard into the Savannah river. There was a thrilling rescue, and the Persian tabby was placed again in the room that had been reserved for it and for Mr. Heaton after much correspondence with the Savannah line officials, and securely locked up.

It was placed under a small allowance of the drug, and this was confirmed upon the arrival of the City of Montgomery, when the cat was taken, in fairly good shape, to a cat hospital in West Fifty-third street.

So well known is the cat in Savannah that there was much opposition to its being taken away.

Mr. Heaton watched tenderly over the four-footed passenger and superintended the transfer to the cat hospital.

While Mr. Heaton would not commit himself without first having consulted the veterinarians, he said he thought the treatment of the cat would be about the same as that given a human being under similar circumstances. By degrees the allowance of morphine will be discontinued and remedies administered that will cause the unnatural craving for the drug to disappear.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

MILLY'S SACRIFICE.

This is a typical story of injustice to woman.

When William Johnson's wife died the children were all married except Milly, the youngest, and it was taken for granted that Milly must stay at home and take care of father.

Milly was willing. She did not realize what was involved in such a career.

Father would be very unhappy, the children said, if he moved to town, and, besides, Milly would have a good home.

Following the family conference, the other children went back to their homes and children and to the accumulation of money.

The years went by. Milly was a comely girl and had suitors, whom she gently refused because she must stay with father.

And when father died Milly was a worn, middle aged spinster.

What did she, prematurely old and faded, get in return for her self sacrifice?

Why, when the old farm was sold Milly got merely her share as one of the heirs and no more.

And the other heirs plucked their share of the proceeds of the estate in their pockets and thought the division, which was "according to law," "a fair one."

They said Milly had had a good home all these years.

Of course they did not know how difficult it might be sometimes to put up with the childlessness and vagaries of an aged man.

They made visits to the old home occasionally, and they could not see that father was "troublesome or hard to please."

And of course they did not realize how Milly had lain her maiden hopes upon the family altar and now, broken in spirit, was facing the world alone.

It was pathetic—almost tragic. And grossly unjust.

Of course the father should have provided especially for Milly in his will, or she should have had a salary for her unselfish labors, even if it took every dollar of the estate to pay it, or the brothers and sisters should have made her some fair money requital.

But—

There are Milly Johnsons in almost every community.

Mr. Robertson's Visit in a Mystery Play.

Mr. Ian Robertson's visit to the United States, appearing at the Janesville Theatre, is one of the most able actors now before the public either at home or abroad.

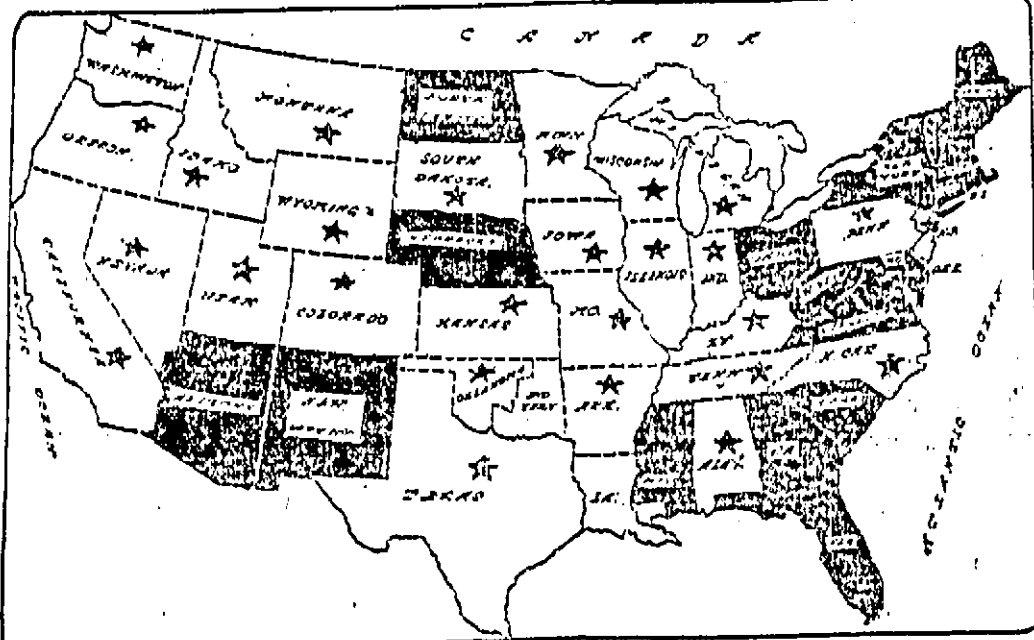

On his present visit he relies entirely on his latest successes, "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," by Jerome K. Jerome, in which he has already appeared 200 times in England, this popular play having enjoyed a run of over 500 consecutive performances in New York and London alone, its reception on the road being no less enthusiastic.

It is seldom that the personality of an actor is so remarkably in harmony with the role he is representing as is that of Ian Robertson in the mysterious and inspiring individuality of "The Stranger" in "The Passing of the Third Floor Back." Ian Robertson does not act the part as others might have done—he lives it! He is the power for the time being. It is that power of conviction in all that he does, added to the personality of another actor, which uplifts the play he appears in to the level of a classic. Yet Mr. Jerome's wonderful play is Boylan whose grotesque and acrobatic dancing deliriums have made them famous, not only in this country, but in Europe and Australia. Lawrence Gotthard, an animal impersonator of no mean ability, is the "Cat." Geo. E. Hart, Marty Martz, J. O. Campbell, and Geo. E. Wakefield are all among the principals.

Count de Beaufort, who is coming to the Myers Theatre, Wednesday, Feb. 22, is an athlete and is continually in training. An examination shows that his muscles are hardened and well knotted. His daily routine begins when he gets up in the morning at 7 o'clock, takes a five-mile walk or run with his dog "Bob," spends half an hour with a rowing machine, after which he hammers a punching bag, uses the dumb-bells, and whenever a partner is around, he does the boxing gloves. The Count is a firm believer in careful systematic breathing, and no matter how strenuous his exercise he breathes evenly.

COUNTRY AROUSED FOR DIRECT SENATE CHOICE.

Washington, D. C.—In the legislature of every state in the Union the question of demanding the adoption of a constitutional amendment providing for the election of United States senators by the people is being discussed. Twenty-nine states have already made the demand. Seventeen are yet to be heard from.
The deadlock in New York, Montana and Iowa in the election of senators at the present time, the scandal surrounding the election of Lorimer of Illinois and the two men in West Virginia, have brought about the urgent necessity for a change in the present method of election.
Within 90 days, it is declared, the application of a sufficient number of states to compel congress to act surely will be obtained, for there is no proposition now before the people which has such tremendous impetus behind it.

Men Not All Alike.
There are men who stay at home every evening in the year and are perfectly contented. There are others to whom an entire evening at home is a sort of martyrdom—a solid week feels like imprisonment for life.

The Passer By (Ian Robertson) and the Satyr in "The Passing of the Third Floor Back" neither melodrama nor pure comedy. "Everyman", and through the eloquent medium of Ian Robertson shows to an extraordinary degree the powers of the stage and popularity of the actor.

"Peace hath its victories no less renowned than war," and is a certainly a striking coincidence that last season's two most pronounced stage successes in England, which spread their influence for beyond the walls of the theatre, should have been on the subject of peace and good will and the alarms of invasion and war respectively.

There has often been a complaint of the comparatively few attempts to treat the middle classes with becoming seriousness. Yet in "The Passing of the Third Floor Back" we have a complete picture of the contrary as shown on the stage in the portrayal of real life. And in the "Passer By," Mr. Ian Robertson's interesting play might have been called "The Mystery of the Third Floor Back" as it has all the indefinable charm of "Everyman" with the atmosphere of the present day. And to the mysterious, spiritual and personality of "The Stranger" or "Passer By," Mr. Ian Robertson is a grandeur of repose and air of simplicity entirely his own. Mr. Ian Robertson will appear in "The Third Floor Back" at Myers Theatre, Monday evening, Feb. 20.

"The Cat and the Fiddle."
The attraction at the Myers Theatre Saturday, February 25, matinee and evening, will be the musical extravaganza success "The Cat and the Fiddle" which deals with magic, sprites, gnomes, elf, fairies, and a story of the mythical life of Ise. It is said to form a combination of that pleasant the most fastidious, and romantic of "The Babes in the Woods," "Mother Goose" and the present success of the century, "Little Nemo."

"The Cat and the Fiddle" has many weird and novel stage characters: The Good Gent and her wonderful glances; Queen Circe, the false queen, who with great globs rules over the destinies of the mythical island, and the earth beings who are spirited away to Eiland; all are said to contain many new ideas in the line of musical comedy.

The plot leads to and permits of a score or more of pretty ballet evolutions, some 20 musical numbers, and a boy of pretty girls well selected and trained, while the charming is of new design, strikingly handsome in many cases and decidedly world in of the scene.

The presenting company numbers forty or more people. The cast is headed by Mr. B. Watson, a favorite comedian and it is said he has secured heavily everywhere he has thus far been seen. He is ably assisted by those clever artists, Rose and Arthur

In 24 Hours Everyone in the United States Will be Talking About This Advertisement

Because—This is The First 1912 Car to be Announced.
It is setting a new pace for automobile manufacturers and dealers—The Regal leads this year.

Because—This is the first of a series of advertisements that will be published, simultaneously in over 450 cities in the United States and will be read by millions of people, and will contain valuable information about the automobile never before disclosed to the public—almost unbelievable—but true.

Everyone knows that the automobile business has had a mushroom growth and that the average automobile factory has presented a scene not unlike that in a newspaper office just before the paper goes to press. It has had all of the wild excitement—all of the feverish haste and all of that disregard for expense that always accompanies any rapid development. High-priced automobiles were the result. The owners paid the bill.

We have for a long time been studying this problem. We wanted to eliminate the most important faults in the automobile manufacturing institution of today. We found several sources of waste. First an immature design, and second an immature and extravagant method of manufacture; third and most important, an extravagant overhead expense. All of these we knew to be abnormal and consequently we set about to correct them. We believed that our success in the motor vehicle industry as in others in which we have engaged, laid in giving our customers the best value and service we could for their money.

For five years we have been studying the automobile conditions in the United States—through all of our representatives, we have received daily reports. We know for a fact what the real conditions are today. Consequently the cars which we have designed and are manufacturing and selling, we know from actual canvass of the owners and prospective owners are what the people want.

Everyone wants the most up-to-date design—the best workmanship—the most value for his money and a guarantee of good service after the car is in his hands.

We are satisfied that in this series of advertisements we shall be able to prove to you conclusively the truth of these statements. We are the first to make an announcement of a 1912 car—a car which we have been thinking about—designing and testing for over two years—a car which we know represents the most modern engineering and manufacturing practices—a car which in value has never been equaled either at home or abroad. It is in all respects the result of a knowledge which we have gained from actual experience.

We have always been the pioneers in setting the price and our "20" which is illustrated above meets in value anything which we have offered before, and competition has failed to produce its equal.

The
Regal
"20"
Price, $900

Price includes Dual Ignition system with magneto. Complete gas and oil pump equipment with generator, jack and tools. Wheel base 109". Tires 22x3 1/2". Brakes—4 in number. Internal expanding and external contracting, acting directly on hub drums. Machine cast on blue. Cylinders—4. Bore—3 1/2". Stroke—14". Three speed and reverse selective sliding gear transmission. Road Clearance—10".

WHY THIS CAR IS DISTINCTIVE.

The Regal "20" is the first underslung car which has ever been sold for less than $4,000. The underslung construction is an expensive type to build—that is the reason. Most manufacturers, like most individuals, don't like to adopt new things unless they are forced to. We have taken the lead because we know that ultimately, cars of this type will embody this construction.

This type of construction is built on sound mechanical principles—there is no question but that it makes the most stable car—the center of gravity is lower—making a straight line drive possible, which, of course, means less loss of power between motor and wheels. The car has less tendency to skid—it holds the road better—there is less side lash on the springs and tires—it makes a very safe car to drive, one which can't turn turtle, and yet with all these advantages the road clearance is still as great as that of the overhung type. Besides the underslung construction lends itself most happily to the long, low body which has become so popular.

The Regal "20" is a car with $4,000 advantages and looks which sells for $900, and this is the reason why it will pay you to not only read these advertisements, but to go to our nearest dealer and look the car over. Don't take our word for what we have said about it. Have the dealer demonstrate it to you.

"Regal 20"—$900

Because—This advertisement tells about a car which is new—a car which is distinctive—a car which is the pioneer underslung car at a popular price.
Because—The Regal "20" at $900 is without competition. No other car equal to this has been produced at the price.
Because—This advertisement contains news about an organization which up-to-date has been conservative in exploiting its products. Until it was sure it was right and had the capacity and organization to satisfactorily and persistently care for the demands of its customers.

We have over 450 dealers in the United States. We are represented in almost every city of reasonable size—none of these dealers are sub-agents or commission men. All of them are recognized dealers doing business with us directly. They have a regular garage and repair shop and are fully capable of taking care of your demands. We have sent our own special men to their cities—have looked over their territory—picked out the best men in each locality.

We want you to go direct to our dealers. We want to give you the quickest and most satisfactory service we can. We know that's the best way—experience has proven it.

We have never employed large-salaried men to write our advertisements.

We believe facts and good cars speak for themselves.

We have never entered into any mergers.

We have never had any Wall St. brokers on our payroll.

We have never attempted to exploit our company as a stock proposition.

All we have done is to make the best cars that could be made and sell them at a price as low as we possibly could, consistent with a fair, legitimate profit.

Our overhead expenses do not exceed 5 per cent.

And yet we have an organization through which we can give you—the purchaser—a thoroughly satisfactory service.

Consequently the money that you invest in a Regal car represents actual value in materials and workmanship—you get real value for your money.

Read what a well-known trade paper says about underslung suspension—Motor World, Jan. 26—"Probably the greatest arguments which can be advanced in favor of the underslung suspension, aside from the attractive appearance it presents, are the low center of gravity and large wheels which are made possible. Underslugging also eliminates to a great extent the tendency to sideways sway. The reason of the fact that the bulk of the weight of the car comes almost in the same plane as the springs which can have no appreciable lateral movement. The adoption of the underslung system by four prominent manufacturers goes to show that it must be reckoned with."

THE ORDER CHANGING.
In commenting upon the gradual elimination of the Gould family from the railroad control of the United States, the Wall Street Journal takes the matter up from a logical standpoint and comments upon it in the following manner. The Gould interests are still very large, but it would appear as though their day for domination of railroad affairs in the United States is over. The Wall Street Journal says it would be hypocritical to express regret at the elimination of Mr. Gould from the railroad situation. Of course he is let down easy with the chairmanship of the board of directors, but no one supposes that the now president of the Missouri Pacific will be responsible to anybody but the controlling majority of the board, and that does not include Mr. Gould. A comparison of the Gould roads with other western railroads, St. Paul, Northern Pacific, Atchafalpa, and above all the Harriman roads, shows plainly enough why the change was inevitable.
From the time when E. H. Harriman triumphantly showed what could really be made of a great western system, the Gould authority in railroad matters was doomed. E. H. Harriman still lives, for his works do follow him, while of the old generation of railroad financiers, the Russell Sages and Jay Goulds have left no monument. Repeated reconstructions have underdone all the work they ever did, for the reason that the work was no had that it had to be done over again. Railroad expansion has many years to run in America before the country will be adequately served; but our energies must be turned to establishing the older construction on a permanent and unshakable base.
It is curious to think that only ten years ago the Goulds of Wall Street turned on "Gould brokers," "Vanderbilt brokers" and other agencies of the stock market owing allegiance to our two greatest financial families. So far as the stock market is concerned, that feudal period has passed. "The Vanderbilt roads are so in little more than name, large in the family interest in them doubtless is. Gould brokers there are none, for Western Union, Manhattan Elevated, Wabash, and now Missouri Pacific, have passed into other and, it must be confessed, greatly more competent hands.

Nobody with the real spirit of democracy will repine. The hereditary principle has serious defects in the ownership of any property. It is absolutely paralyzing when exercised in railroad management in such a country as this. Frequent changes of control may sound dangerous, but they are favorable to railroad growth. Ten years ago it looked as if all the railroads of the United States would finally come under one ownership. There has been concentration since; but disintegration on a more considerable scale has been the real feature of railroad history on any analysis of ownership as it stands today.
Missouri Pacific's identity is not to be merged in that of any other system. It has natural merits of its own, and when it gets the president it has long needed a few years' prosperity will place it in the position it should have occupied long ago.

SAVE THE CLIPPINGS.
In the making-up of a newspaper the management tries to please the greatest number of readers possible. Try to have material that is interesting to all classes. Church news for the church people, sporting news for those interested in that, news for children, news for the housewife, news for the busy man and the general news of the community and world at large for all. The Gazette has many special departments. Its "Heart to Heart Talks," its "Woman's Page," "Uncle Walt," the regular continued story and the country correspondence. Aside from these and other departments it publishes a great number of most interesting incidents in the world's history and development. An exchange, in commenting upon the work of the average newspaper, makes the following suggestion:
"Newspapers are the greatest and most inexpensive storehouses of current information known, and yet the average reader scans his favorite journal hurriedly and casts it aside, attaching only momentary value to the important facts set forth therein. Here and there may be found readers of a different sort, men and women who realize the vastly educative nature of some newspaper articles and keep them for reference purposes. But aside from the persons who collect in this manner data on subjects of special interest to themselves, there are not many who thus make use of the newspaper. Perhaps it never has occurred to some men and women that jokes and illustrated fashion articles are only a portion of the newspaper matter that is worthy of preservation.
"All things considered, it might not be unreasonable to propose that every household have its own clipping bureau, devoted to the family's present and prospective needs, available for ready reference on any subject from cooking recipes to school composition subjects. Intelligent selection, classification and indexing of material for such an institution would make it a valuable adjunct to the family library, and it would occupy only a small amount of space. At first the clippings might be grouped in large envelopes under the general designations of government, law, language and literature, history, biography, science, invention, discovery, fine arts, education, transportation, industry, domestic economy and miscellaneous subjects. Then, as the matter accumulated, the lines of classification could gradually be drawn finer, smaller envelopes being used for the subdivisions of clippings about government, literature and so on.
"The value of such a reference library to the boy or girl student surely ought to be inestimable. It would provide a fund of information available nowhere else and hardly secondary in worth to that contained in the indexed magazines on the shelves of public libraries. Parents can afford to give the clipping-bureau idea serious attention. The gathering of such a collection of data is an education in itself."

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.
An English receipt for former President Roosevelt is given in an exchange as follows:
"A little bit of Lord Cromer,
But only a little bit;
A little touch of Lord Curzon,
But only a little touch;
Bismarck, Lauffer and Emperor Will,
Cromwell, Jupiter and Buffalo Bill."
So Postmaster General Hitchcock has pulled in his horns on that question of increasing the postal rate on magazines. If Mr. Hitchcock had advocated the cutting off of the congressman's franks he could not have received a more severe slap on the wrist than has been administered to him by the members of both houses.
It looks now as though congress would be called in an extra session to pass that reciprocity treaty. However, has it ever been considered that perhaps after all this bluster in the United States, perhaps Canada may turn down the proposition in its anxiety to please England?
An early robin has been seen by a Rock county farmer. There is still hope, however, that we do not have an early spring and then a season of winter again as we had last year.
It would appear as though Speaker Ingram means business when he tells the lobbyist to beware how he oversteps the rigid lines laid down for his conduct.
Reports say that it takes two hobbles to make one harem skirt. Think of that!

When I was young I hoped to be a pirate on the deep blue sea. I'd sail a long, low, rakish craft, wherein thereon men like demons laughed, and I'd be called, from sea to sea, "The Bad Man of the Biscayas." These visions faded, and I became ambitious of the fighter's fame. The great John L. had conquered all; I hoped his wrath would some day fall upon my brow, and there remain brothers scragged for 't in vain. I used to lie awake at night, and see myself absorbed in fight; my foe's arm always left the ring a battered, bruised and bleeding thing. I, indurated, stood and bowed, and beamed upon the frantic crowd. Such dreams are gone, and now my hopes are not for blood or prize ring ropes. I think I'll hump myself this year and try to be an auctioneer.

How many persons know where the bones of the original Santa Claus lie? At present they repose in a town in southern Italy, where they have rested for nearly nine centuries. Before they were laid to rest there the good St. Nicholas was buried for six centuries in Myra.

ADVANCE SPRING STYLES
Spring Models of Faultless Style in Costumes and Suits, and Skirts and Coats
Every ready-to-wear model concerned in this advance display is unique in that it has no counterpart elsewhere—the ideas, while original, are highly effective and distinctly correct. Words do them scant justice—only your own eyes will convince. While others are getting ready and thinking about buying we have the new things on display, several thousand dollars' worth and the volume of early business already done has been a surprise even to us.
SUITS
Here may be seen the largest assortment of new and up-to-date styles we have ever shown.
All the new effects in weaves and styles may be seen among this wonderful display.
In buying this season we took into consideration the many figures to be fitted and selected our styles accordingly. Our suit jackets were bought in three lengths, so that all may be pleased. We are showing the very short, the medium short, and the 26-inch lengths. The cloths were never as pretty as those shown this season, mostly in the men's suiting such as Scotch worsted, novelty bourette, home spun, shepherd checks in color, imported Panamas, and many high grade novelties. These styles are moderations of the prevailing Paris designs.
Of the many suits laid before us is one of particularly striking effect. Black French novelty goods with a flock of white giving a faint stripe effect. The 26-inch jacket is lined with the new Kings blue, inlaid black satin reverses and pockets, inlaid white satin collar, red satin under-vesting. Shirt is of the new tube effect with very little fullness.
Another very nobby suit is made of novelty bourette in tan and green mixed, 24-inch jacket, tan satin lining, large self reverses, brown poplin inlaid collar with just a touch of brown stripe Persian silk. Trimmed at bottom with wide cross bands, piped with brown poplin. Has double row of small smoked buttons down front. Skirt is modified tube style, trimmed with wide self foot bands and smoked pearl buttons.
A third suit that you will comment upon is a larger shepherd plaid in brown and white, 24-in. jacket, tan satin lined, self reverses, collar of tan satin edged with band of gilt and Persian braid. Has two tailored pockets. The buttoning is invisible with the exception of one large fancy button at top. Buttonholes are faced with tan satin, skirt has pancelled back and front with inverted box pleat at side.
SEPARATE COATS
Heavy English serge is the first choice in cloths for the spring coats, followed close by Scotch mixtures and home spuns, 56 inches long, semi-fitting long satin reverses, shawl collars, square sailor collars and the regular tailored collars Persian and satin band trimmed.
Sizes are: Juniors, 13 years to 19 years; Misses, 14 years to 16 years; Ladies, 34 in. to 49 in. bust.
Colors navy, black, brown, reseda, raisin, king's blue, copenhagen, tan, white and Scotch mixtures.
SKIRTS
Just received large shipment for spring. Styles for this season's separate skirts are not as narrow as the suit skirts.

A NECESSITY— NOT A LUXURY

Don't make the mistake of chasing Dental work on your teeth as a luxury. It's a necessity for the prolonging of your life, and the maintenance of your health.

You may go on having a cure free, letting your teeth go, and losing a tooth now and then, but

There's a time coming fast on your trail, when you will have to answer seriously for your neglect.

I see every day in my office someone who bemoans his foolishness in letting his teeth go to pieces.

False teeth are a poor substitute for what nature gave us.

I make bushels of them, but I don't recommend them to anybody who can possibly keep their own natural teeth.

Avoid trouble, and have your teeth put in order.

MANY ATTENDED THE SESSIONS AT COURT

Usual Monday Morning Grist of Drunks in the Municipal Court.

"Give me a chance to go home and work," said Ole Johnson of Williams Day, to Judge Field, when he, with six others charged with drunkenness, was arraigned in municipal court this morning. "If there's a fine, I'll send you the money." But Ole had not behaved himself since coming to Jansville to work with a steam shovel gang, and he was sentenced to three days in jail.

Julius Light of Madison, met a friend on the train while he was on his way from the Capital City to Deloit. Said friend had a bottle of whiskey. Light told the court this morning, and he shared it. "Wasn't a highball, was it?" asked the court. Julius shook his head. Three dollars and costs, four dollars in all, or six days in jail, was the penalty fixed. Light went to jail.

Similar fines were assessed against Mike Stanton and Frank Monahan of Monroe, Ronald Sweeney and Mike Laydon of Madison, all of whom paid up and were released.

Frank Cannon, a nineteen year old youth, who formerly made his home here and returned a week and a half ago to take away his belongings, was unable to pay a fine of $5 and costs or $6 and will serve ten days in jail. It was alleged that Cannon misbehaved himself and struck a woman on South River street. Asked where he secured the liquor, Cannon said he gave the money to a stranger who was passing through the city, who secured whiskey for him. Cannon was brought up on a similar charge about a year ago.

ONE-YEAR SENTENCE GIVEN BERT KINER

Judge Field Sends Wife Deserter to State Prison for Twelve Months.

Bert F. Kiner, convicted by a jury in the municipal court on Friday afternoon of unreasonable neglect and failure to support his wife, was this morning sentenced by Judge Field to serve one year at hard labor in the state prison at Waupun, the first day to be spent in solitary confinement.

Arguments in the hearing of the motion for a new trial, sought by the defendant's attorney, Thomas S. Nolan, were heard in the court this morning and the motion overruled. Attorney Nolan for the defense argued that there had been no evidence to show that Kiner had intended to desert his wife and the statute under which prosecution was started could not be construed to punish a man for not supporting his wife when she had not backed support and had not been dead.

Kater, he held that the same construction should be taken of the law as in divorce cases where a decision was rendered that where the plaintiff had not lacked of support, there could be no cause for proceedings on charges of desertion.

The district attorney in presenting his arguments said that under the law at present the question as to whether Mrs. Kiner had been in need of support was not an element in the defense. The judge held with the district attorney and said that the defense had not shown where there was an error in the trial.

Sheriff Hanson took his prisoner to Waupun on the noon train today. The state statutes provide, the judge explained to Kiner this morning, that he may be paroled in good behavior at the end of six months.

LOUIS F. KNIPP DIED SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Well Known Jansville Business Man Passed Away at His Home Yesterday at Six O'clock.

Louis F. Knipp, for twenty-eight years a prosperous and respected business man of this city, passed away at his home 485 North Chatham street after an illness of a number of years.

Mr. Knipp was born at Wauwatosa, Wis., in November, 1853, and there he received his early education and training. In September of 1877 he was married at Burlington, Wis., and for the following six years Mr. and Mrs. Knipp lived in Milwaukee.

In 1883 they came to this city and Mr. Knipp purchased the brewery of Michael Both. He was engaged in the brewery business until some eight years ago when owing to poor health he sold out to the present owners.

He was prosperous in his business dealings and was well and favorably known in the city. He was a member of the Concordia society and was esteemed by his many friends here.

Besides his wife he is survived by two daughters and one son: Mrs. H. O. Schmidley, Miss Laura Knipp, and William Knipp, all of this city. The funeral will be held Wednesday afternoon at half past one from the home and at two o'clock from St. Paul's German Lutheran church. Rev. J. C. Koerner will officiate.

Patrick Tracy.

The remains of the late Patrick Tracy will arrive here for burial at 11:15 tomorrow from Green Bay, and will be taken direct to the cemetery.

Patrick Tracy died at his home in Green Bay on Saturday last after an illness of some four years. The deceased was born in the town of Center about fifty eight years ago, and most of his life was spent in that township. Some eight years ago he moved to this city where he resided for six years when he went to Green Bay which has been his home since that time.

Headed his wife he leaves two sons Frank Tracy of Green Bay; Mrs. Maude Conklin of Chicago; and Mrs. Fred Ross of Madison. He also leaves three brothers and two sisters: Michael of Chicago; Joseph of this city; and Daniel of South Dakota; Mrs. Poland and Alice Tracy of Atlanta, Iowa; also a sister-in-law, Mrs. H. Tracy of this city.

F. J. Buell.

A dispatch received this morning by Dr. J. F. Brown, superintendent of the State School for the Blind, announced the sudden death of F. J. Buell of Burlington, Wis. Mr. Buell was a brother of Mrs. Brown. He was a man just past fifty and apparently in the best of health. While talking to his wife this morning he dropped to the floor and expired almost immediately. Mr. Buell was postmaster of his home city and prominent in business and social circles. His death comes as a surprise to Mr. and Mrs. Brown, who recently attended the celebration of Mr. Buell's fiftieth anniversary. They left for Burlington at 10:30 this morning.

Mrs. Mary McShane, a large number of friends and relatives gathered to pay their last respects to the late Mrs. Mary McShane at the funeral services which were held this morning at nine o'clock from St. Patrick's church. Rev. James McCrimley officiated and interment was in Mt. Olivet cemetery. A profusion of floral offerings testified to the esteem in which the deceased was held. The pall-bearers were: James Deo, John McCue, John Casey, William Buchanan, John Gokey, and John O'Connor.

Services Sennett.

Funeral services for the late Alice Sennett were held at half past one this morning from St. Thomas church at Deloit. Father J. M. Ward officiated and the interment was in the Catholic cemetery at Deloit.

Argued Her Own Case.

Miss Corn Maude Nance of Newport argued her own case in the court of appeals recently and won it. This is the first time that a woman has ever argued in this court and naturally her friends are much elated over her victory.

From a Greek Idyl.

I fell in love with thee, maiden, I on the day when first thou comest with my mother, and didst wish to pluck the hyacinth from the hill, and I was thy guide on the way. But to leave loving thee, when once I had seen thee, neither afterward, nor now, at all, have I the strength even from that hour.—Theocritus.

Neglecting the Eyes.

Neglect of the eyes may result not only in poor sight, but in a poor skin. Neglect of the eyes, weakening of the eyes, causes wrinkles, screws up the face in a most unbecomingly fashion, and adds scores of tiny crowfeet about the face and forehead.

Sexton Dug His Own Grave.

The death occurred at Barwell, near Nuneaton, recently of John Neeham, the oldest bell-ringer in England, who celebrated his ninety-sixth birthday a few months ago. As sexton of Barwell he had dug 2,500 graves and been present at 400 weddings. Some years ago he dug his own grave and therein he was interred.—London Daily Mail.

Prodigies Wear Out.

There is some chance of a boy amounting to something if he is stupid when six years of age. It is the boys who are prodigies at learning when they are young who stay out in the rain when they are grown.

A Cold Snap.

"Why did you name your dog Frost?" "Because he has such a tipping way about him."

NOV. 7TH TO 22ND, 1912, IS THE BEGINNING OF "THE NIGHT OF TERROR" FOR HUMANS ON THIS GLOBE.

Humanity now follows men and books, have turned their backs on God, refused to hear and to heed what he says. Mat. 21:33-46, and will be left to punishment, Jer. 17:5, until eager to do the best that each knows.

Socialism, Unionism, Anarchism and Nihilism have set that date for "The World Strike" in which to destroy Capitalism, Graters, Churchmen and Governments.

God and Nature are using the above named, to destroy the outgrown systems now occupying this globe, to clear the ground ready for the arranging of chastened humanity in The Just and Perfect Government of Heaven on Earth. Dan. 7:12.

The 15 Days of Rev. 18:4-24 and the 15 Days of "No Traffic, No Mail, and No Wire Communications" planned by Socialism, Unionism, Anarchism, and Nihilism for The World Strike Nov. 7, 22, 1912 are the same 15 Days.

Those desiring to remain in their physical bodies (Rev. 13:10) should at once begin to learn how to stand safely aside (Rev. 18:4) under conscious guidance of Christ and His 444,000 during the Destruction, Riotism, Starvation and Carnage, beginning Nov. 7, 1912. Luk. 18:17.

To go on piling up useless dollars in the face of such destiny when preparation alone will ward off calamity and death is about as wise as the ant hurrying to complete its hill in the path of a torrent.

Convincing Evidences, Illustrating Models, Diagrams, and Demonstrations not explained to the public, are furnished day or night to parlor or special gatherings by appointment anywhere in the city or state.

His Only Resource.

It used to be the rule in the navy that officers were required to defray traveling expenses out of their own funds, and upon reporting at the new station they were reimbursed from the United States treasury after the usual delay incident to "red tape." Unless officers had money put by it proved extremely embarrassing to have to meet the expenses of a long journey. Naval officers tell of an incident that occurred some years ago, when a notably impetuous officer on duty in New York received orders to proceed to Alaska to join one of the ships of the Bering sea patrol squadron. The officer, who had no ready money and could not persuade any of his friends to make him a loan, wrote a long letter to the secretary of the navy asking to be relieved of his orders or to be furnished with money to defray his traveling expenses. The secretary saw in the letter an attempt to get out of unpleasant duty, and a peremptory telegram ordered the officer to proceed at once. He obeyed, first telegraphing as follows:
"Have proceeded in obedience to orders on foot. Next address Harrisburg."

No need to say, upon his arrival in Harrisburg he found a telegram authorizing him to draw travel money in advance.—Lippincott's Magazine.

Hoarding.

Hoarding is not only an economic mistake, but an economic crime as well. It is, in fact, a survival of the evil days of misadministration. It comes down to us from the time when nearly all governments were conquerors which considered themselves entitled to plunder their subjects. Thus hoarding is founded upon distrust of the government.—Statesman, Calcutta.

COMBINE MEETS WATERLOO

Chicago Packer Declares Millions of Pounds of Butter and 60,000
Cases of Eggs Remain
Unsold.

Chicago, Feb. 20.—"Millions of pounds of butter and 60,000 cases of eggs in cold storage which are usually consumed before this time of the year are still unsold. That was the statement made by Herbert A. Emerson, president of the United States Packer company, who will testify this week before a subcommittee of the senate committee on live stock and dairying.

Mr. Emerson in amplifying his statement said that the cold storage trust has lost millions of dollars within the last two months through the smashing of the cold storage corner on eggs and butter.

Trust Meets Waterloo.

"Consumers throughout the country will be greatly pleased to know that the butter and egg trust which has had such a firm grip on the throats of consumers and producers alike for the last five years, has at last met its Waterloo, and this has been brought about through the publicity given the operations of the trust by the press," said Mr. Emerson.

"There are today in storage in the United States in the warehouses which report to the association known as the American Warehousemen's association, approximately 30,000,000 pounds of butter, and in the warehouses which do not report to the American Warehousemen's association an equal amount, or about 60,000,000 pounds of surplus frozen butter taken away from the consumers throughout the last 12 months.

But Housewives Economize.

"It was held with the expectation of making the consumer pay approximately 40 cents to 45 cents per pound for this butter for which the producers receive only about 20 cents per pound, and in paying the producer for his butter it is bought in the form of what is known as butter fat—in other words, they buy the cream separated from the milk and the trust concerns operating creameries figure on what is known as an overrun of from 30 to 35 per cent.

"Nearly a year ago the press began to call attention to the operations of the butter and egg trust and the result has been that the housewife has kept close watch on her bills and has economized whenever opportunity presented itself. The result is at present the finest creamery butter can be bought throughout the United States at from 27 cents to 28 cents per pound."

SPECIAL MAKES RECORD RUN

Train Bearing Charles G. Gates Travels at Rate of Over Mile a Minute.

Chicago, Feb. 20.—The special train carrying Charles G. Gates, stricken son of John W. Gates, from Yuma, Ariz., arrived in New York city last night after a record breaking run over the New York Central lines from Chicago.

Mr. Gates was taken suddenly ill with blood poisoning in Texas and was rushed toward the eastern metropolis to receive expert medical attention.

On the last lap of the journey from Chicago to New York, 975 miles, all records for eastern travel were broken. The distance was covered in 980 minutes. Mr. Gates left Chicago at five a. m. and his train was standing in the Lexington avenue station at 10:49 p. m. Through change of engines along the route there was lost twenty-six minutes, so that the actual running time for the distance was 952 minutes.

Ordinary Artisan Never Before
Conferred in German History.

Berlin, Feb. 20.—The Kaiser has conferred the notable distinction of life-long membership of the Prussian upper chamber (Herrenhaus) on Herr Harry Plate of Hanover, a master plumber.

This honor, which is traditionally bestowed on noblemen as a reward for eminent service to the state, has never before been awarded to an ordinary artisan. Herr Plate will take his place in the most exclusive of legislative chambers. This workingman peer is one of the leading non-Socialist labor leaders in the country.

The voyage is to take place in the course of a dinner, which promises to be one of the most unique society functions ever given in Philadelphia.

Just who will be the others is a mystery. Mr. Cox refuses to make known the identity of his guests.

The item appearing in these items several days ago relative to Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Duxstad leaving their 2 boys in the care of neighbors for a day while they made a trip to Chicago was not true. The item was written as told by a person whom we had no reason to doubt, but who it seems did not know the facts.

The statement in the Clinton items of last Thursday that the German Lutheran church had voted to discontinue their parochial school and that school would be held only during the summer months and nine months of Saturday school was incorrect. The matter has been discussed and may be voted on at their next business meeting in April. The item was the cause of misunderstanding the informant.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Nilans of White-water spent Sunday here, guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Drake.

LEADING DRIVER EARNS $42,170 IN YEAR. "POP" GEERS.

While the official year book will not be issued until next month, the statistics are sufficiently accurate to make an interesting compilation of the leading winners in the big harness race last year, starting with Grand Rapids and ending with Lexington. As in the past five years, Ed Geers, the grand old man of the trotting turf, heads the list of winning drivers with a total of $42,170, the leading trotter of the year, Anglo Archdale, 2:06 1/4, with a total of $23,750, and the leading pacer, The Abbe, 2:04, with a total of $16,760, both being in his stable.

Mike McDevitt comes second with $35,182, his winnings being confined exclusively to the horses in the Shaw stable, headed by Joan, 2:04 1/4, the 4-year-old trotting mare that landed over $17,000 of his total.

Illustrating the increased earning capacity of youngsters, a 3-year-old, the champion trotter of his age, Colorado E., 2:03 1/4, is second in the winning list of trotters, with a total of $18,755. Emily Ellen, 2:09 1/4, and Grace, 2:08, come respectively fourth and fifth in the list with a total of over $30,000 between them, while Na-

Newspaper Advertising First THEN Window Displays

(Extract from D. J. Luby ad, Saturday, Feb. 4.)

We are now finding out that next to newspaper advertising, well-lighted, right priced, authentic style displays in the windows are the best trade pullers.

Every advertisement to be properly effective must make a good impression upon the reader. A single ad, like a single good impression, is not sufficient to influence much trade. The good impressions from the ads must be made every day. When sufficient good impressions are made people begin to patronize the advertiser.

If you would see the force of this logic, reverse conditions. Suppose the impressions the public receive tonight through this newspaper were poor impressions—how long a time would it require for business to fall off?

Each advertisement in this newspaper is carried into over 6000 homes tonight—seven-eighths of the homes in Janesville and three-fourths of the homes on rural routes adjacent to Janesville, and from 50 to 75 per cent of the homes in outlying cities, towns and rural routes.

Each issue of The Gazette carries a SWORN STATEMENT of circulation so that its advertisers may know exactly how many people are receiving their ads.

The Gazette Publicly Makes Known Its Ad- vertising Rates

so that advertisers may know that they are not paying more for space than their neighbors and competitors. The merchants of Janesville are fortunate in having ONE paper that covers the field alone more thoroughly than most cities of 16000 population are covered by two papers; because, where two papers MUST be used, TWO advertising rates (almost as high as The Gazette advertising rates) must be paid.

The White Owl

CAN you picture a beautiful valley with pretty little white cottages here and there with countless trees, and great woodlands all about? Well, that is the land of a place where Myrtle and Frederick lived. It seemed as if this beautiful little land had been dropped right down into the heart of the woods, but how those little people came to live there along with a few other gentlefolk is still a mystery.

the white owl. He always comes with the first fall of snow," suddenly shouted the girl.

But anyway they lived there and they were the only two little folks in the valley. It was winter time and the ground glistened under a fresh fall of snow. Within one of the little white cottages a great hearthlog spluttered and danced in the flame in the fireplace. And, gazing straight into the leaping firelight sat Myrtle and Frederick.

"How blue some of the fire is," said Myrtle leaning her head over to one side.

"It is a soft blue, like the feathers of the bluejay," said Frederick. "The yellow is like the face of the moon."

"Do you see white flame?" asked the little girl softly.

The log groaned and gave an extra loud splutter.

"Yes," answered the boy. "It is soft like the breast of the white owl."

"Oh, the white owl—it is white for

"No," answered the boy quietly, "I wanted to surprise you."

Myrtle forgot in an instant.

"Shall we hunt for him tonight?" she asked all excited.

"Yes," answered the boy softly.

"We will go now."

And out they went into the moonlight, out across the valley carpet of silver white, straight towards the black wood. They were not afraid. Neither spoke. Behind them a trail of tiny black holes led straight to the door of the cottage.

Well within the shadow of the trees they stopped. They peered straight into the inky blackness ahead. Not a sound.

"Do you see him?" whispered Myrtle.

"No," answered the boy.

There came a muffled fluttering sound and above their heads they suddenly noticed something silvery floating softly along.

"The white owl," whispered the girl.

"Yes," said the boy.

They watched in silence the flying bird until he was lost to sight in the woods.

"It means we will have good luck for a whole year because we saw him the first time it snowed," cried the boy, shouting aloud with joy.

"Yes! yes!" cried the girl happily.

Laughing and shouting they ran straight for the little white cottage where within the hearthlog still spluttered forth its blue, yellow and red flame.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON.

ON JANUARY 14, after a two weeks' trial, one of my friends gave over her New Year's resolution.

The resolution was to take every day, night and morning, a certain set of exercises, which a first-class doctor had promised would correct the ungainly stoop, broaden the narrow shoulders and improve the sallow complexion which keep my friend from being a pretty girl.

Incidentally, of course, the exercises would also vastly improve her health, but the young lady in question, being at an age when appearance is paramount, was the butt which was used to lure her to make the resolution.

My friend gave up the exercises, not because she hadn't the backbone to keep them up—not at all. If they had been doing her any good, she would gladly have kept them up until doomsday. But she couldn't see that they were.

Her mirror told her as plainly as ever that she was still narrow shouldered and stooping and sallow.

And she had taken the exercises two weeks.

And she had been acquiring that narrow chest and stooping shoulders and sallow skin about eighteen years. Wasn't that logic for you?

And yet it's the logic that kills enough good resolutions and reforms to make us a world of healthy, wealthy and wise men and women.

Rome was not built in a day.

But it might quite as easily have been as a good complexion or a good figure or a sweet disposition.

I know a girl who by strictly adhering to certain facial treatment for a year has won for herself a good complexion. This change in the last few months is startling. But for the first few months she worked without any apparent results.

Because she had the common sense not to expect a miracle and the courage to keep on without one, she won out.

The budding tendency to hang on during that time before apparent results make hanging on seem worth while—Isn't that one of the characteristics that has conquered the world?

Seldom is a fortune made without it, never is a character built, good health gained, or a reform put through without it.

The world is full of failures who failed just because they couldn't not along without apparent results in a day.

When you have reached the crest of the hill and are going down with the momentum of success behind you it's easy enough to keep on going.

It's climbing the hill with the back-pull of no apparent results that show a man's mettle.

Courage, comrade on the up-slope; think what fun it will be going down.

PROBABLE heir to one of world's greatest fortunes may have his way, too. How a Los Angeles mamma is bringing up a rich boy and what his young viewpoints are.

WANTED—A job on the police force. The unfeeling interference of his parents and the embarrassing fact that he happens to be probable heir to $100,000,000 may handicap the applicant somewhat in his conditions. There is no doubt in the mind of little William Andrews Clark III, the 5-year-old grandson and heir of former United States Senator Clark of Montana, as to which way destiny points her bony and decisive finger. The fact that his illustrious grandparent professes mines and railroads cannot dim in his ears the clarion call of fate.

Unless he can carry a billy club in his powerful right hand; a gun in his back pocket, and a pair of handcuffs hooked into his belt as he prowls the street by night, capturing bad burglars and such, there is going to be a dim and distant upon the ambitions of a young millionaire.

The "millionaire baby"—it's the seventh deadly sin to call him that, by the way—wants to be a policeman; and that's an end of it.

WHERE MOTHERS FAIL.

Some one has said that the day her son is born a mother begins to hate the girl he will wed, meaning, of course, that from the earliest moments of her child's life the mother begins to worry and fret about the other woman who will some time in the natural course of events come into his life—and to worry over her imperfections.

Unfortunately, there have been very few mothers since the world began who have ever thought any girl or woman good enough to be their son's good wife, but also to be good husband.

Just as soon as a woman is elevated by her sister woman in the light of a possible daughter-in-law she becomes all imperfections no matter how perfect she may appear to others.

The mother's heart, wonderfully big and magnanimous in other things, becomes small and narrow when it tries to contemplate this divided interest in her son's life and so we have that ancient bugbear, the mother-in-law of ridicule and jest. It is just this bugbear, perhaps, that frightens most girls from the moment they contemplate uniting their lives with those of others—a contemplation which naturally is not alluring.

If mothers could only begin from the very beginning of their boys' lives to prepare themselves for the inevitable and to train their sons for the obligations of their lives—to not only be good sons, but also to be good husbands.

bands and fathers—the world would enter upon another golden era. My 'tis, but most mothers by their over-indulgence and solicitude raise within their sons all of the selfishness and pettiness that later makes them disagreeable and exacting in family life.

Mother herself waits upon John hand and foot and the girls of the family are made to attend him as if he were a young god. He may be a perfectly sweet and lovable lad in everything else except his demand for attention. He never knows where his own things are and it never occurs to him that he might make life easier and more enjoyable for others if he would learn to care for himself.

In the little courtesies and elegances of life he may be a past master. In the essential he is a woful failure. And with his idea of his own importance distorted and with his perceptions distorted in only one direction he fares forth to seek the one being of all—his soulmate.

He finds her. To him she is all perfection—she is divine. To his mother she is a most ordinary human being. The moment mother finds John's intentions towards the girl are serious that moment she begins her campaign of resentment against her son's choice and not infrequently against his life's happiness. Naturally, the girl becomes resentful when she realizes the position her prospective mother-in-law has taken and so falls in her one chance in a thousand. Thus the two who should be a man's greatest source of inspiration in the world begin to create for him a veritable place of torment.

Mothers should not only educate their sons for their places as the heads of domestic establishments but they should educate themselves for their future positions as mother-in-laws. Girls who expect to become wives, and most girls do, should train themselves to be amiable and worthy daughters-in-law.

There are also white blouses whose shoulder and upper sleeve sections are in colored voile or marquisette, while little hems or touches of embroidery in the same color appear elsewhere. Many pretty little blouses are made with the neck and sleeve finished with pink or blue. One of these, seen in a shop, had the pink hems and Irish lace bands and had also a band of the pink running from waistline to bustline up the front, set into the white blouse with narrow lace and adorned with white flat crocheted buttons, having pink in their centers.

Voile and marquisette are the favorite materials for lingerie blouses this season. First of all, they are durable. The meshes are woven in loose, strong patterns, and the fabrics can be washed over and over again without the slightest evidence of wear and tear. Then, again, they are wash, which in one of the regulations for summer frocks. Voile and marquisette are inexpensive and come in double width. The square mesh of either cotton voile or marquisette forms an excellent background for embroidery. A quickly sketched in design in conventional squares or circles will form an effective yoke. Heavy mercerized cotton in colors will work wonders: silk of the coarse strands used in all branches of decorative work, gives a delightful touch. The elaborate lingerie and net frocks which are flaunting among the advance models displayed by the fashionable shops give out the idea that the next summer season's styles will not be famous for their simplicity, although occasionally one may find some charming model of domestic simplicity. In the fine lingerie models open work embroidery plays an important role, being used freely with lace and with other hand embroidery, and one often finds bold open work designs on comparatively heavy linen entering into combination with the sheerest and finest of handkerchief linen, French lawn or batiste.

The lower part of the skirt, for example, may be entirely of the heavier linen, weighted with heavy embroidery, while the rest of the frock, save for trimming motifs, may be fairly embody in its fineness. Another idea frequently developed shows very sheer lingerie material veiling bold embroidery in open work and raised embroidery, the latter showing frankly, also in trimming bands or motifs. Heavy laces too are used for contrast with the sheer soft lingerie materials and like the heavy embroidery will drag a soft frock down into the approved straight and narrow lines. Irish lace is lavishly used, having apparently quite regained the popularity which seemed for a time to be waning.

Vegetarian lace, which has been one of the greatest favorites during the winter, is applied to the cotton marquisettes, voiles, lawns and linens, though usually in combination with other laces and in motifs set in with other laces rather than in bands or large quantities. Then there are certain heavy and effective Russian and fluted and fringed and Cluny and Italian laces which contrast pleasantly with the vaporous stuffs and are usually softened by quantities of sheer lace preferably Valenciennes, although madras and other laces not traditionally associated with lingerie materials are also used. As no one dreams of tabling a fine Hungarian frank nowadays the old trimming rules and regulations may be laid aside and what was once considered an offense against the eternal fitness of things, is now permissible.

Whether the new skirt invented by a famous French designer will attract the same amount of attention as the "hobble," remains to be seen. But one would think the "harem" contained even greater humorous possibilities for the funny photographer than its predecessor. The "harem" resembled the garment worn by Turkish ladies. It is a divided skirt, but so subtly are the divided parts merged into the upper portions and so gracefully draped are those divisions that the general outlines of a boy's skirt are preserved. The "harem" skirt is designed for indoor and outdoor wear upon all sorts of occasions.

The monastic circle is much in vogue. It is merely a heavy shawl or metal cord, which is girded above the waist in the classic fashion and tied into a knot, with two long ends and tassels at the front or side.

Another appealing suggestion for a girdle to define the approved high waist is shown in a model of old-fashioned children in ivory or pale green. The girdle is made of broad, exquisitely simple gold and green tissue ribbon, with a "pattern" of gold gold medallions.

Turbans and bonnets for theatre wear are marvels of beauty. They are fashioned of metallic nets and laces. Jeweled whisks or algebras are placed at the side. Some silver or gold net capuchons have scarlet satin wings placed at the side.

Matching head and evening slippers are delightful to the woman of fashion. The finest of silks or lace with soft matching lines, added with beads and pearls and beautifully embroidered. The trimming extends well to the knee in many cases.

Evening dresses may now show the crown of the shoulder. This "crown décolletage" is reminiscent of Empress Eugenie's time. A flimsy of airy tulle is draped over the shoulder and brought to the front under a cluster of flowers.

HOW TO COMBAT CATARRH.

Catarrh is a constitutional condition, exhibited in different forms in different locations, due to the accumulation of waste matter from the mucous membrane. Simple diet, avoiding the production of waste, deep breathing of pure air with regular exercise to remove the unavoidable waste, activity of all the organs of elimination, and drinking plenty of pure water, are the chief measures of relief. Drugs and local treatments are of no permanent value, though surgical aid may be given, sometimes, in nasal catarrh. The climate has an important influence, the cold and damp air of the lake region being especially unfavorable, the dry, warm air of the Southwestern States being favorable.

Fads and Fashions

New York, Feb. 20.—One piece frocks are undoubtedly popular, but that does not mean that blouses will be out of the running during the coming season. A glance at the advance displays in the fashionable shops will dispel any erroneous notions in that direction. There have been in pretty blouses in other seasons, but never were they more charming than at this time. The most adorable models may be found in the big shops and their prices vary a great deal according to the materials and trimmings used.

Last year a touch of color crept into many of the blouses and this year the color note is even more pronounced, the result being extremely attractive. Last summer the color element crept into white blouses through the medium of embroidery or in the line imported cottons and linens in which a colored design appeared on a white ground. These effects are again shown this season, but something new is the little yoke or hem or inserts of finest cotton marquisette or voile in color, a French blue and a soft pink being the coloring most often repeated.

One sees such models everywhere and with innumerable variations. One pretty white blouse is of sheer imported French lawn, a material which in the desirable qualities is preferred by many house makers to handkerchief linen, because it is softer and sheerer, while wearing admirably. The design was simple. The cuffs of the three-quarter sleeves showed a band of French blue cotton voile between narrow bands of real Irish linen. A little way in the middle of the front in a narrow tab was set into the blouse by a line of the Irish linen, and around the top of the close standing blue collar was a line of the insertion. Tiny white buttons embroidered with a fleck of blue in the center were set down the front of the white yoke and its tablike continuation.

There are also white blouses whose shoulder and upper sleeve sections are in colored voile or marquisette, while little hems or touches of embroidery in the same color appear elsewhere. Many pretty little blouses are made with the neck and sleeve finished with pink or blue. One of these, seen in a shop, had the pink hems and Irish lace bands and had also a band of the pink running from waistline to bustline up the front, set into the white blouse with narrow lace and adorned with white flat crocheted buttons, having pink in their centers.

HOW TO COMBAT CATARRH.

Catarrh is a constitutional condition, exhibited in different forms in different locations, due to the accumulation of waste matter from the mucous membrane. Simple diet, avoiding the production of waste, deep breathing of pure air with regular exercise to remove the unavoidable waste, activity of all the organs of elimination, and drinking plenty of pure water, are the chief measures of relief. Drugs and local treatments are of no permanent value, though surgical aid may be given, sometimes, in nasal catarrh. The climate has an important influence, the cold and damp air of the lake region being especially unfavorable, the dry, warm air of the Southwestern States being favorable.

GOLD DUST Digs Deep After Germs

GOLD DUST not only cleans but sterilizes.

Soap merely washes over the surface, leaving a greasy film behind it.

GOLD DUST "goes to the bottom," and insures absolute purity and sanitary safety. Why not sanitize your home, as well as clean it?

Soap needs muscle help; GOLD DUST does all the hard part of the task without your assistance.

GOLD DUST is a good, honest, vegetable-oil soap, to which are added other purifying materials in just the right proportions to cleanse easily, vigorously, and without harm to fabric, utensils or hand.

Foolish, indeed, is the woman who tries to get along without GOLD DUST.

Do not use Soap, Naphtha, Borax, Soda, Ammonia or Kerosene with Gold Dust. Gold Dust has all desirable cleaning qualities in a perfectly harmless and lasting form.

TWO PRESIDENTS ARE EULOGIZED

COMPARATIVE MEMORIAL SERMON BY REV. J. W. LAUGHLIN OF PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

ROSE TO AN EMERGENCY

Where the Two Great Men Differed and How They Both Rose to a Crisis.

Giving a comparative character sketch of the two most beloved of American statesmen, Rev. J. W. Laughlin of the First Presbyterian church, yesterday delivered a very interesting sermon in the form of a Lincoln and Washington memorial.

Choosing for his text the sixth chapter of John, the third verse, dealing with the change of Stephen and others as deacons.

"An emergency arose in the history of the early church," said Mr. Laughlin, "and there was discussion about the collection of monies. The apostles advised the choosing of several good men to meet the emergency. This was done and the threatened trouble was averted and the church continued to grow. Like these, Washington and Lincoln were chosen to meet emergencies in the history of their country and they met them and the country was saved. These men, like the new deacons in the bible, faced new conditions in the emergency and as a result of their work in the crisis have become the patriotic souls of their country."

"It would be hard," he continued, "to find two men who were more dissimilar than Washington and Lincoln. They differed in tastes, education, environments, tendencies and in their personal characteristics. Washington was a tall man with large hands and feet, broad shoulders and a military bearing. He was dignified and sedate and was also polished and at home in the parlor. Lincoln was a tall man with large hands and feet but he was not dignified. He was a plain man, without formal ceremony and was not what one would term at home in the parlor."

"These two men also were dissimilar in their mental make-up. The first President was not a wit and was never known to make a pun. He was of a serious turn of mind and was never known to engage in repartee. Lincoln was a wit and many of the dark clouds of his career were lifted by flashes of his humor. Washington was a college man while the great emancipator never saw the inside of a college and all his schooling amounted to about ten months. Still, Lincoln had a literary mind and his choice of words was wonderful and the concise and clear way in which he spoke was a revelation to his contemporaries."

"Both of these men were pioneers, however, and both were forced to meet emergencies. Washington had no precedents to guide him and was forced to make his own way. Likewise Lincoln faced a new condition in the springing up of civil strife. Two crises in the life of our nation met in the lives of these two men. It was the task of the first to give our country a place among the nations of the world and it devolved upon the second to pull that nation out of a crisis when she faced certain destruction."

"Today things are different and there are emergencies to meet under altogether different conditions. The country has grown from the seven millions population of Washington's time to the hundreds of millions of today. Many problems are here for us to meet today and under these entirely new conditions men say, 'Go back to the principles of our fathers.' We might just as well go back to the old agricultural implements of the olden days. But what we do need is the courage of our fathers and the strength and perseverance in civic matters that our forefathers had."

"Another thing in which these two great men were alike is that they were both deeply religious men. Washington was a catholic and dignified Episcopalian, saying his prayers three times a day. Lincoln was not a member of any church but he was of a deeply religious nature. When the tide of war was going against him and victory seemed to be perching on the Southern banners, Lincoln prayed and continued in his faith in the Creator."

"As these two men opened their hearts to God and the truth, so it is the duty of the men of today to have the moral courage to vote like Christian citizens. The ethics of the New Testament must be the ethics of the present and the future. If men pray for the courage to do what is right, then we like our illustrious examples, may meet the emergencies as they arise."

Mr. Laughlin at the opening of the service spoke of the new idea of closing the postoffice on Sunday and urged the people to sign the petition slips which were being circulated through the congregation. He said that only about nine out of every ten persons received a letter on Sunday and then there was always the chance that it could have just as well have waited until the next day. Especially good music was also a feature of the service, several very fine selections being rendered by the Jansville Symphony orchestra.

The word of Mr. Grant came as a shock to his sister, and she immediately notified Mrs. Grant's brother, Dr. Byron Meeker of Portage, and they left together for New Orleans as quickly as possible, expecting to reach there tonight.

All that is known is that Mr. Grant is in a critical condition and that he is in a hospital in the above city. It was also stated in the telegram that an operation would be necessary as soon as possible.

BISHOP MESSMER PREPARES RULES

FOR THE COMING LENTEN SEASON FOR ALL CATHOLICS.

ALL CATHOLIC CHURCHES

Will Announce Them Embler Week Begins March 11 and Holy Week in April.

The rules and regulations to be followed in the Catholic churches and homes during Lent have been prepared by Archbishop S. G. Messmer and will be read in all of the churches next Sunday, Ash Wednesday, the first day of Lent, will fall upon March 22 and will come at the end of the forty day penitential season on April 16.

The regulations for the period are as follows: 1. All Fridays and fast days during the year are days of abstinence from flesh meat. On Saturdays, which by law are also days of abstinence, flesh meat is allowed by apostolic indulgence at all meals, unless they happen to be fast days.

2. The following are fast days of obligation: All days of Lent (except Sunday); the ember days, the vigils or eves of Pentecost, of the Assumption of B. V. M., of All Saints, and of Christmas; lastly, the Fridays of Advent.

3. Rules for Fasting. On fast days only one full meal a day is allowed to persons obliged to fast. This meal must contain a portion of bread, with a piece of meat, eggs, butter, milk, etc., in the evening. For sufficient reason the collection (church) may be taken at noon and the dinner or principal meal in the evening.

During Lent by apostolic indulgence, flesh meat is allowed only at the principal meal on week days, except all Wednesdays and Fridays, and also Saturdays in ember week (March 11) and holy week (April 15). On fast days flesh meat and fish (including oysters, crabs, frogs, turtles, etc.) are never allowed at the same meal. A rule which applies even to the Sundays in Lent and to all persons however otherwise excused or dispensed from the law of either abstinence or fast, that meals may always be prepared with the drippings of either fat or lard. Persons excused from fast may use flesh meat more than once in the days it is allowed to all, whether in Lent or outside of that season.

4. Catholics having attained the sufficient use of reason are bound by law of abstinence. But when it is either physically or morally impossible to observe the law, or when it would entail serious difficulties, they are excused from it.

5. Sick Are Exempted. In virtue of the apostolic faculties granted us by the holy see, we hereby delegate pastors to dispense, in each single case, from abstinence, the men actually engaged in thrashing, as well as the former families at whose place thrashing is going on.

6. Catholics having completed their twenty-first year of age are bound to fast. But the causes just mentioned in regard to abstinence apply also to the law of fasting. Hence the church ordinarily exempts from fasting the sick and those in feeble health (whether by sickness or old age); women nursing children; all who are engaged in laborious and exhausting occupations. Persons in doubt whether they are excused or not should consult their confessor or pastor for advice or dispensation.

Almsgiving Suggested. In virtue of the apostolic indulgence we permit workmen and their families the use of flesh meat at the principal common meal on all fast days and abstinence days throughout the year, with the exception of all Fridays, Ash Wednesdays, the Wednesday and Saturday of holy week and the eves of Christmas.

7. Persons excused or dispensed from the law of fast or abstinence ought to perform some other good works of piety and charity in the spirit of Christian penance and satisfaction. Hence the pious custom of giving Lenten alms. "Redeem thou thy sins with alms, and thy iniquities with works of mercy."—Dan. iv, 24. Also the custom of abstaining from intoxicating drinks, of staying away from theatres, card parties and other profane amusements, etc.

SEVEN DEAD IN FIRE

ONLY HEAD OF FAMILY SAVED WHEN HOME BURNS.

Mother and Six Children Burned—Falling Stairway Prevents Father From Losing His Life.

Sutton, W. Va., Feb. 20.—Seven persons lost their lives in a fire which destroyed the home of J. D. Hardin in this city.

Only Mr. Hardin escaped, the six remaining members of his family and a little girl who made her home with the Hardins perishing in the flames.

The fire was caused by a natural gas leak. When Mrs. Hardin awoke the entire first floor was ablaze. Awakening her husband, he seized two of the children and dashed for a stairway, which immediately collapsed. The two children were lost, while the father was precipitated to a point of safety.

Mrs. Hardin, seeing the stairway fall, jumped from the second story, receiving injuries from which she died later.

The bodies of the five Hardin children and that of Ada Green were cremated.

The Hardin home was located on the outskirts of the town, and although neighbors discovered the blazing building before Mrs. Hardin jumped from the window they were powerless to render assistance.

There was no ladder in the neighborhood long enough to reach the second story windows and spectators stood horrified by the knowledge that the children were being burned to death and they could not prevent it.

Twenty minutes after the fire was discovered the wooden building was a blazing mass and ten minutes later collapsed. Scores of men searched the smoking pile of ashes and charred boards for the bodies, but no atom of human form could be found.

Mr. Hardin is crazed by grief and is forcibly detained in a hospital to prevent him doing himself bodily harm.

Kindly Feeling.

While pruning a grape vine the shears slipped and, cutting through a thick buckskin glove, nearly cut my thumb off. The blood spurted out as I ripped off the covering. The aged gardener, picking up the glove, remarked, with deep feeling: "It was a great pity, for to spill such a noble bit of leather. Still, I guess we might mend it for a trifle."

Cavanagh, Forest Ranger

The Great Conservation Novel
By HAMLIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1910, by Hamlin Garland

Cavanagh's attempt to change his hopeless tone proved unavailing. Enfeebled by his hardships and his prison life, he had little reserve force upon which to draw in fighting such an enemy. He sank soon after this little speech into a coma which continued to hold him in its unbroken grasp as night fell.

Meantime, seeing no chance of aiding the ranger, Redfield and the forester prepared to return, but Lee, reinforced by her mother, refused to accompany them. "I shall stay here," she said, "till he is safely out of it—till I know that he is beyond all danger."

Redfield did not urge her to return as vigorously as Dalton expected him to do, but when he understood the girl's desire to be near her lover he took off his hat and bowed to her. "You are entirely in the right," he said. "Here is where you belong."

Redfield honored Liza for her sympathetic support of her daughter's resolution and expressed his belief that Ross would escape the plague. "I feel that his splendid vigor, combined with the mountain air, will carry him through, even if he should prove not to be immune. I shall run up again day after tomorrow. I shall be very anxious. What a nuisance that the telephone line is not extended to this point. Ross has been insisting on its value for months."

Lee saw the doctor go with some dismay. Young as he was, he was at least a need to cling to in case the grisly terror seized upon the ranger. "Mr. Redfield, can't you send a real doctor? It seems so horrible to be left here without instructions."

"The forester, before going, again besought Cavanagh not to abandon his work in the forestry service and intimated that at the proper time advancement would be offered him. "The whole policy is but beginning," said he, "and a practical ranger with your experience and education will prove of greatest value."

"To this Ross made reply: "At the moment I feel that no promise of advancement could keep me in this country of grafters, ponchers and assassins. I'm weary of it and all it stands for. However, if I could aid in extending the supervision of the public ranges and in stopping forever this murder and burning that go on outside the forestry domain I might remain in the west."

"Would you accept the supervision of the Washakie forest?" demanded Dalton.

"Taken by surprise, he stammered, "I might, but am I the man?"

"You are. Your experience fits you for a position where the fight is hot. The Washakie forest is even more a bone of contention than this. We have laid out the lines of division between the sheep and the cows, and it will take a man to enforce our regulations. You will have the support of the best citizens. They will all rally, with you as leader, and so end the warfare there."

"It can never and till Uncle Sam puts rangers over every section of public lands and lays out the grazing lines as we have done in this forest," retorted Cavanagh.

"I know, but to get that requires a revolution in the whole order of things." Then his blue young face lighted up. "But we'll get it. Public sentiment is coming our way. The old order is already so rotten away that only its shell remains."

"It may be. If these assassins are punished I shall feel hopeful of the change."

"I shall recommend you for the supervision of the Washakie forest," concluded Dalton decisively. "And so goodby and good luck."

England, his blood relatives, even the Redfields, seemed very remote to the ranger as he stood in his door that night and watched the sparkle of Swenson's campfire through the trees. With the realization that there waited a brave girl of the type that loves single heartedly, ready to sacrifice everything to the welfare of her idealized subject, he felt unworthy, selfish, vain.

"If I should fall sick she would insist on nursing me. For her sake I must give Swenson the most right orders not to allow her, no matter what happens, to approach. I will not have her touched by this thing."

Beside the blaze Lee and her mother sat for the most part in silence, with nothing to do but to wait the issue of the struggle going on in the cabin, so near and yet so inaccessible to their will. It was as if a mule wall, crystal clear, yet impenetrable, shut them away from the man whose quiet heroism was the subject of their constant thought.

It was marvelous, as the dusk fell and the air slipped keen, to see how Liza Wetherford renewed her youth. The excitement seemed to have given her a fresh hold on life. She was weary, but by no means weakened, by her ride and all her efforts of the rule fare which Swenson set before her. "This is what I needed," she exultantly said—"the open air and these trout. I feel ten years younger already. Many's the night I've camped on the range with your father with-nothing but a pup tent to cover us both and the wolves howling round us. I'd feel pretty fairly gay if it wasn't for Ross over there in that cabin playing nurse and cook all by his lonesomeness."

Lee expressed a deep satisfaction from the fact of their nearness. "If he is ill we can help him," she reiterated.

"There was a touch of frost in the air as they went to their beds, and though she shivered, Liza was undismayed. "There's nothing the matter with my heart," she exulted. "I don't believe there was anything really serious the matter with me, anyway. I reckon I was just naturally grouchy and worried over you and Ross."

CHAPTER XX.

WITH THE AID OF THE PRESS.

LEE VIRGINIA was now living a romance stranger and more startling than any she had ever read. In imagination she was able to look back and down upon the Park as if she had been carried into another world—a world that was at once primeval, yet peaceful; a world of dreaming trees, slinging streams and silent peaks; a realm in which law and order reigned, maintained by one determined young man whose power was derived from the president himself. She felt safe—entirely safe—for just across the roaring mountain torrent the two intrepid guardians of the forest were encamped. One of them, it was true, came of Swedish parentage, and the other was a native of England, but they were both American in the high sense of being loyal to the federal will, and she trusted them more unquestioningly than any other men in all that west save only Redfield. She had no doubt there were others equally loyal, equally to be trusted, but she did not know them.

She rose to a complete understanding of Cavanagh's love for "the high country" and his enthusiasm for the cause, a cause which was able to bring together the student from Yale and the graduates of Borgen and of Oxford and make them comrades in preserving the trees and streams of the mountain states against the encroachments of some of their own citizens, who were openly, shortsightedly and cynically bent upon destruction, spoliation and misuse.

She had listened to the talk of the forester and the supervisor, and she had learned from them that Cavanagh was sure of swift advancement now that he had shown his courage and his skill, and she thought that he might leave the state to take charge of another forest brought her some uneasiness, for she and Liza had planned to go to Sulphur City. She had consented to this because it still left to her the possibility of occasionally seeing or hearing from Cavanagh. But the thought that he might go away altogether took some of the music out of the sound of the stream and made the future vaguely sad.

For the next two days Cavanagh slept but little, for his patient grew steadily worse. As the flame of his fever mounted, Wetherford pleaded for air. The ranger threw open the doors, admitting freely the cool, sweet mountain wind. "He might as well die of a draft as smother," was his thought, and by the use of cold cloths he tried to allay the itching and the pain.

With the coming of the third night Wetherford was unconscious and unrecognizable to any one who had known him in the days of "the free range." He was going as the wild west was going, discredited, ulcerated, poisoned, incapable of rebirth, yet carrying something due to his grave. He had acted the part of a brave man; that shall be said of him. He had gone to the rescue of the poor Blaque instinctively, with the same reckless disregard of consequences to himself which marked his character when as a cow boss on the range he had set perfectly well that nothing will ever be done about this thing unless the press insists upon it. It's up to you and me (the representing the conscience of the east)—here he whistled an eye—and you federal authority to do what we can to bring these men to their punishment. Better reconsider. I'm speaking now as a citizen as well as a reporter."

"There was much truth in what he said, but Cavanagh refused to go further in the matter until he had consulted with Redfield."

"Very well," replied Hartley. "That's settled. By the way, who is your patient?"

"Blaque, of course. Ross told the story. Just a poor old mounted hobo, a survivor of the cowboy west," he said, "but he had the heart of a hero in him, and I'm doing my best to save him."

"Keep him in the dark—that's the latest theory—or under a red light. White light brings out the ulcers," he said, "but he had the heart of a hero in him, and I'm doing my best to save him."

"He takes darkness. That's one reason why I've opened the doors and windows."

"All wrong. According to Plösch, he wouldn't put in the dark. However, it doesn't matter on a cowboy. You've a great story yourself. There's a fine situation here, which I'll play up if you don't object."

Cavanagh smiled. "Would my objection have any weight?"

"The reporter laughed. "Not much. I've got to carry back some sort of tale. Well, so long. I must hit the trail over the hill."

Cavanagh made civil answer and returned to his patient more than half convinced that Hartley was right.

The "power of the press" might prove to be a very real force in this pursuit.

As the journalist was about to mount his horse he discovered Leo Virginia on the other side of the creek. "Hello," said he. "I wonder what this pretty maiden means."

And, dropping his bridle rein again, he walked down to the bridge.

Swenson interposed his tall figure.

"What do you want?" he asked bluntly.

"You don't want to get too close. You're been talking to the ranger."

Hartley studied him coolly. "Are you a ranger too?"

"No, only a guard."

"I've had it."

aside the most difficult tasks for his own rope or gun. His regard for the ranger into whose care he was now about to commit his wife and daughter persisted in spite of his suffering. In him was his hope, his stay. Once again, in a brief moment, he reverted to the promise which he had drawn from Cavanagh.

"If I go you must take care—of my girl—take care of Liza too. Promise me that. Do you promise?" he insisted.

"I promise—on honor," Ross repeated, and, with a faint pressure of his hand on slender and weak, Wetherford sank away into the drowse which deepened hour by hour, broken now and then by convulsions, which wrung the stern heart of the ranger till his hands trembled for pity.

The day was well advanced when the sound of rattling pebbles on the hill back of his cabin drew his attention, and a few moments later a man on a weary horse rode up to his door and dropped heavily from the saddle. He was a small, dark individual, with spectacles, plaid of the shirt.

"Beware! Smallpox!" called Ross as his visitor drew near the door. The newcomer waited his hotel contentedly. "I've had it. Are you Ross Cavanagh?"

"I am."

"My name is Hartley. I represent the Denver Roundup. I'm interested in this sheep herder killing—merely as a reporter," he added, with a flattering smile. "Did you know old man Dunn of Deer Creek had committed suicide?"

Cavanagh started and his face set. "No."

"They found him shot through the neck and dying—this morning. As he was gasping his last breath he said, 'The ranger knows,' and when they asked, 'What ranger?' he said, 'Cavanagh.' When I heard that I jumped a horse and boat 'em all over here. Is this true? Did he tell you who the murderer was?"

Cavanagh did not answer at once. He was like a man caught on a swaying bridge, and his first instinct was to catch the swing to get his balance.

"Wait a minute. What is it all to you?"

Again that peculiar grin lighted the small man's dark, unwholesome face. "It's a fine detective stunt, and, besides, it means $20 per column and maybe a 'boost.' I can't wait; you can't wait. It's up to us to strike now. If these men knew you have their names they'd hike for Texas or the high seas. Come now! Everybody tells me you're one of these idealistic highbrow rangers who care more for the future of the west than most natural born westerners. What's your plan? If you'll yoke up with me we'll run these devils into the earth and win great fame and you'll be doing the whole country a service."

The ranger studied the small figure before him with penetrating gaze. There was deliberate fearlessness in the stranger's face and eyes, and, notwithstanding his calm, almost languid movement, restless energy could be detected in his voice.

"What is your plan?" the ranger asked.

"Get ourselves deputized by the court and jump these men before they realize that there's anything doing. They count the whole country on their side, but they're mistaken. They've outdone themselves this time, and a tremendous reaction has set in. Everybody knows you've held an even hand over these warring Plets and Scots, and the court will be glad to deputize you to bring them to justice. The old sheriff is paralyzed. Everybody knows that the assassins are prominent cattle ranchers, and yet no one dares move. It's up to you fellows, who represent law and order, to act quick."

Cavanagh followed him with complete comprehension, and a desire to carry out the plan seized upon him.

"I'd do it if I could," he said, "but it happens I am nursing a sick man. I am perhaps already exposed to the same disease. I can't leave here for a week or more. It would not be right for me to expose others."

"Don't worry about that. Take a hot bath, fumigate your clothing, shave your head, I'll fix you up, and I'll get some one to take your place." Catching sight of Swenson and Liza on the bridge, he asked: "Who are those people? Can't they take your nursing job?"

"No," answered Cavanagh bluntly. "It's no use. I can't join you in this, at least not now."

"But you'll give me the names which Dunn gave you?"

"No! I can't do that. I shall tell the supervisor, and he can act as he sees fit. For the present I'm locked up here."

The other man looked the disappointment he felt. "I'm sorry you don't feel like opening up. You know perfectly well that nothing will ever be done about this thing unless the press insists upon it. It's up to you and me (the representing the conscience of the east)—here he whistled an eye—and you federal authority to do what we can to bring these men to their punishment. Better reconsider. ## 112 LEAP FROM BURNING SHIP

Vessel Arrives at Mazatlan Port a Mass of Flames.

ALL PICKED UP BY BOATS

Flames Burst Out on Steamer Banito Juarez as She Enters Harbor—Passengers Become Panicked—Stricken.

Mazatlan, Lower California, Feb. 20.—With almost the entire population of the city lined up along the harbor front watching the spectacular sight, the Pacific steamship Banito Juarez, which has been plying between this port and Ensenada, steamed into the bay a veritable mass of flame and smoke.

One hundred and twelve passengers on board jumped into the shallow water of the bay and saved their lives, but lost all their baggage and other effects.

Matches Cause of Fire.

The flames were discovered on the steamer by the pilot who boarded her outside the breakwater. He found the coal bunkers to be on fire. The vessel's cargo consisted mainly of tequila, which contains a heavy percentage of alcohol, and a heavy shipment of matches. The matches were ignited from the heat of the burning coal, the flames quickly spread to the tequila and in a few moments the vessel was a roaring mass of flames.

The crew fought manfully with the hose while Captain Miranda got all the passengers on deck to windward.

Passengers Are Panic-Stricken.

The flames became so hot that the sailors ceased playing the streams of water and turned them on the passengers, whose clothing had begun to catch fire from the intense heat. Meanwhile, all possible speed was being made toward the harbor and safety.

When the ship came in close to the harbor, scores of tugs and launches, manned by merchants, officials and society men, rushed to the assistance of the burning vessel. The passengers became panic-stricken and jumped from the decks into the bay. They were picked up by boats which had come alongside. None of the crew or passengers were injured.

When the steamer was finally abandoned, she was only a charred mass. The steamer and cargo were uninsured and the loss is total.

SELLS HIS WIFE AND BABY

Omaha Man Purchases Woman and Child for 25 Cents From Disgraced Husband and Father.

Omaha, Neb., Feb. 20.—Dick Watson of Omaha has sold his wife and eighteen-month-old baby girl to Charles Roosevelt for 25 cents. Roosevelt borrowed the quarter with which to purchase the couple, took them home with him and all parties seem satisfied. Watson and his wife were married three years ago, but have not lived happily. After a row, Watson, in a spirit of bravado, said: "I'll sell you for a quarter if anyone will buy."

Roosevelt heard the remark and said if he could borrow the money he would take the bargain. Watson agrees to ask for a divorce.

"SHOOT'S UP" OCEAN LINER

Passenger Creates Great Scare by Running Wild While Armed With a Revolver.

New York, Feb. 20.—Henri Lynch, a second cabin passenger on the liner Laurentine, which came in from Liverpool, created great excitement among the 532 passengers on the high seas by running wild with a revolver. Lynch bolted from his cabin last Friday night and fired wildly along the port corridor of the stateroom deck. He had been anguished by a joke about his nationality.

FREE IF IT FAILS

Your Money Back If You Are Not Satisfied with the Medicine We Recommend.

We are so positive that our remedy will permanently relieve constipation, no matter how chronic it may be, that we offer to furnish the medicine at our expense should it fail to produce satisfactory results.

It is worse than useless to attempt to cure constipation with cathartic drugs. Laxatives or cathartics do much harm. They cause a reaction, irritate and weaken the bowels and tend to make constipation more chronic. Besides, their use becomes a habit that is dangerous.

Constipation is caused by a weakness of the nerves and muscles of the large intestine or descending colon. To effect permanent relief you must therefore tone up and strengthen these organs and restore them to healthier activity.

We want you to try Rexall's Orderly Bowel Remedy. They are exceedingly pleasant to take, being eaten like candy, and are ideal for children, delicate persons and old folks, as well as for the robust. They act directly on the nerves and muscles of the bowels. They apparently have a neutral action on other associate organs or glands. They do not purge, cause excessive looseness nor create any inconvenience whatever. They may be taken at any time, day or night. They will positively relieve chronic or habitual constipation, if not of surgical variety, and the myriads of associate or dependent chronic ailments, if taken with regularity for a reasonable length of time. 12 tablets, 10 cents; 36 tablets, 25 cents. Sold in Jansville only at our store, The Rexall Store, The Smith Drug Co.
